

gold age home
a spirited competition by dttdc to construct an old age home in east delhi. a reasonably sized site opened up into a large park that was the big community space for the entire neighbourhood. the idea was to connect this 'home' to the community by linking programs and opening the site to them.

a large spice court in the middle of the residential units to give a vocation to the people, with development of the site all around the herbal garden and nursery brought this 'not so positive' program to life. it was also seen as a way of livelihood, this could then be the bond that brought everybody together. programs like a yoga centre clubbed with a library, lounge and dining gave the entire project a comfortable, warm and self sufficient look and feel.
