07 VILLA AGRA

It was a great opportunity for us as a design office to work around and all the basic functionalities and requirements of the client where time, energy, money and exposure were unlimited. One could dare to dream an idea and it stood a good chance of converting itself to reality.

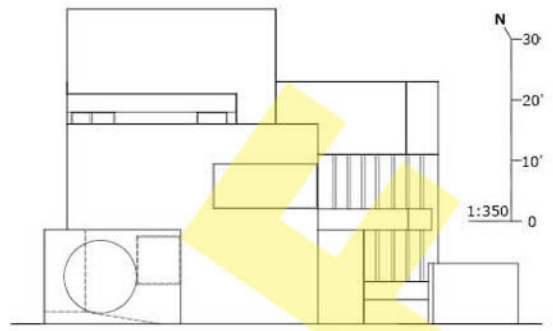

A tight site in a neighborhood of private residences made the façade a very blank, bold and clean statement. It expressed style, respected the privacy of the owners and challenged the design typology of front gardens and glass.

As a functional structure, the basement took the cars and the services, the ground took public functions, first took the private domain and top took the intensive servant back up.

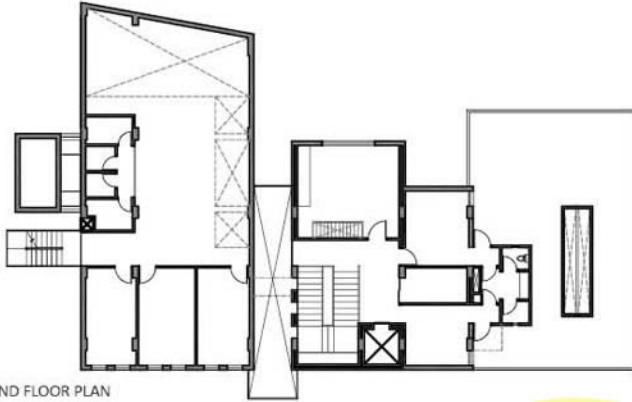

At the level of a foot print, the house enclosed a large central garden that gave all rooms view and light.
